AT THE KIDS' TABLE

At the Kid's Table

Cast
Tina
Jimmy (cousins)

Setting: A crowded dining room. Tina and Jimmy are seated at the kid's table with a group of other kids. The other kids are all smaller than Jimmy and Tina.

Jimmy: [irritated] I don't know why I have to sit at this dumb kid's table. I should be sitting with the adults by now.
Tina: Oh, it's not so bad, Jimmy. They're kind of funny.
Jimmy: No, they're not. All they're talking about is little kid cartoons and all the games that they play.
Tina: You don't have to be such a grump! It's Thanksgiving!
Jimmy: Whatever.
Tina: [rolling her eyes] Anyway, my mom said that the turkey was almost ready.
Jimmy: I sure hope so. I'm starving.
[several minutes pass and someone finally sets the plates of food on the kid's table]
Tina: Yum! I love gravy.
Jimmy: I hate gravy. It's so gloppy.
Tina: And I love mashed potatoes!
Jimmy: Mashed potatoes are so gross.
Tina: And look at the cranberry sauce!
Jimmy: It looks like lumps of pink goo.
Tina: [frustrated] Jimmy! What is your problem! Every time I say anything, you have to disagree with me.
Jimmy: It's just that you're saying everything wrong. The turkey is cold, the stuffing is lumpy, and I hate drinking milk. I hate everything about this day. I shouldn't even be sitting over here at this kid's table!
Tina: Sheesh. You're in a bad mood.
Jimmy: Yes, I am.
[several minutes pass and the kids sit in silence]

Tina: So what happened today?
Jimmy: I don't know. We just didn't

WHAT TEACHERS ARE SAYING

I used this with my reading group before Thanksgiving and they were so fun! I have many sets of Reader's Theatre from this author!

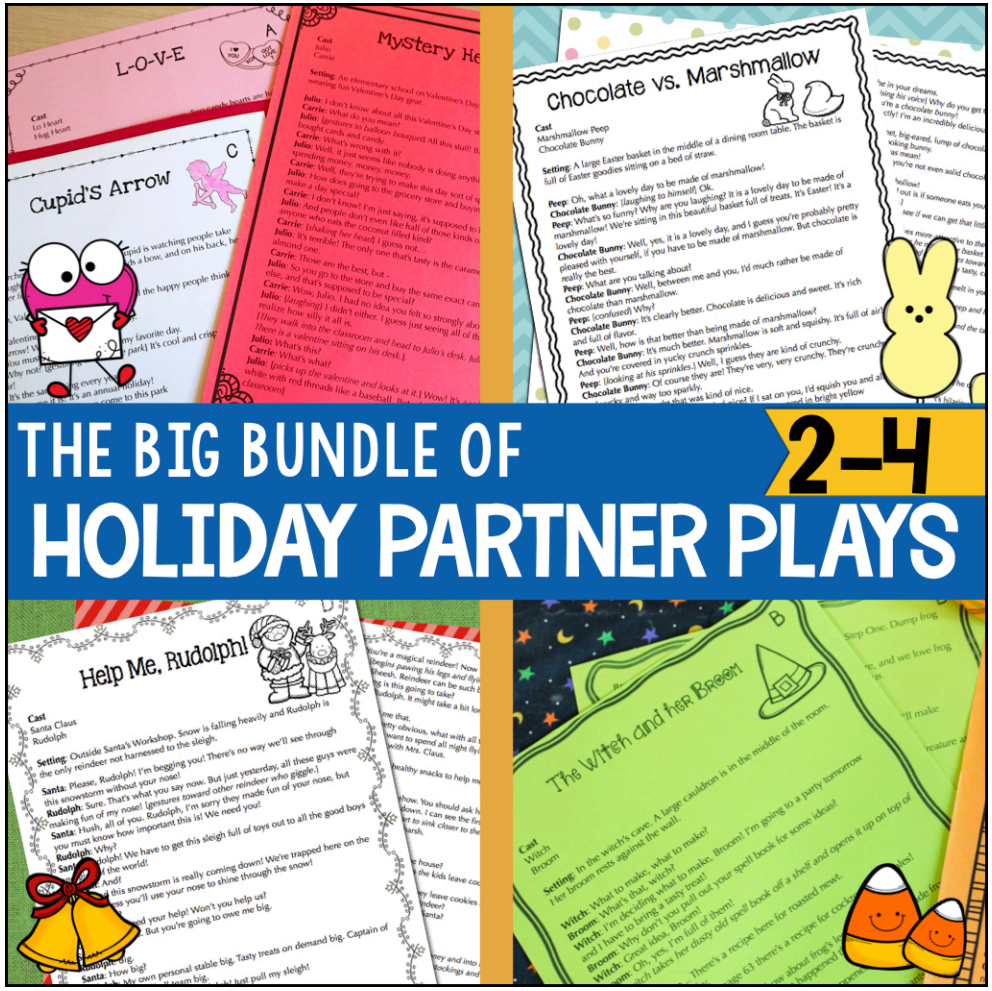

These are terrific short plays for a quick drama lesson.

My students loved reading these during Thanksgiving. It was great fluency practice that was very engaging!

Always a hit! I love seeing the confidence my students get from a Partner Play.
